To whom it may concern-

I write to strongly oppose labeling Organic any milk or meat produced in unnatural settings, using unnatural and/or inhumane means. This definitely includes terminally confining animals (in this case: cows) and preventing them from free-range feeding on the materials they evolved eating (in this case: fresh grass growing in fields).

We still do not understand the health issues related to natural sunlight exposure in all fauna. We certainly understand much about the benefits physical activity and perception of freedom. Conversely, we understand how harmful it is to not have these in our daily lives.

Please use your conscience and resist corporate interests in order to serve the critters who serve us and to be honest with the people who choose Organic.

Sincerely,

Charen Fegard
